USG seeks student opinion

By Andrew Scharf
REPORTER

The Undergraduate Student Government is asking for students' thoughts on a resolution that would change the way students are billed at Student Health Services.

Representatives from USG will be asking students' opinions yesterday, today and tomorrow in the Union Lobby from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Students can sign their names on a form stating whether or not they are for or against the proposal.

"This is what we are here for,"

Matt Lyons, USG head of Rules and Procedures, said. "This was brought to us because we represent the students. These are things we want the students' input on."

Student Health Services proposed the implementation of a $20 per semester health fee. Students would not have to pay for each individual visit to the Health Center. The fee would also cover most services provided by Health Services including X-rays, and testing.

X-Rays cost a student an average of $100 while strep A screens and urinalysis tests cost a student $10, but all would be free under the proposal.

"It will be a fantastic source of convenience," Dr. Joshua Kaplan, medical director of Student Health Services, said. "Students won't have to go to labs elsewhere so that their insurance can pay for the procedure."

Kaplan said that many students refuse testing because their insurance does not cover tests at the Health Center. The standard fee would take away the insurance companies being involved with Student Health Services.

USG believes that it is important to get the students' thoughts on the proposal before making their decision.

Before the proposal was presented to University Administration, Dr. Kaplan came to USG. Dr. Kaplan is looking for the approval of the students through USG and the Graduate Student Senate. Dr. Kaplan will not make a presentation to the administration without the support of these organizations.

"This is an issue that affects every undergraduate student," Kylien Schellhause, USG senator from Harshman, said.

Schellhause is a member of the student health advisory committee. Schellhause was involved in bringing the resolution to USG.

Kaplan also believes that a standard fee will make Student Health Services more efficient. Students will not be charged for individual visits, so time will not be spent on setting up the bursar bill.

"It is not going to make Student Health Services more money," Kaplan said. "It is about providing better service."

Residence Life offers housing options

By Brandi Hasting
REPORTER

The University's first On-Campus Housing Fair will be held today in the Lenhart Grand Grand Ballroom of the Student Union from 11 a.m. - 6 p.m.

The Fair, which is sponsored by the Office of Residence Life, will present many opportunities for students to learn about many aspects of on-campus living.

Representatives from residence halls, Greek Affairs and living/learning and theme communities will all be on hand to talk to the students and answer their questions.

Other University programs and services that will have displays at the fair include the libraries, Student Health Services, Dining Services and Residential Computing Connection. Meijer will also have a display.

There will be ongoing Powerpoint presentations explaining how to sign into My BGSU and register online for housing.

Every hour between noon and 5 p.m. there will be interactive presentations concerning housing registration. The presentations will allow students to ask questions that will be answered by a representative of Residence Life.

Students attending the fair can enjoy free food and music from WFAL. From 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. there will be drawings for prizes including T-shirts, a DVD player, a portable CD player, gift certificates and cash prizes. The drawings will take place every 15 minutes.

There will also be two grand prize giveaways in which students can register to win one semester of free housing or one semester of a free meal plan. Only students who attend the fair and sign up for on campus housing for the 2003-2004 school year will be eligible to win these prizes. They will be distributed in March 2003.

Amy O'Donnell, the assistant director of Residence Life for the Housing Administration, said that the purpose of the fair is to identify the benefits and convenience of living on campus.

"We want to do everything we can to educate the students," she said. "We want to put a positive spin on what the options are."

The fair also gives students the opportunity to get hands-on experience with the online sign-up process. "Students are more savvy about using the Web portal," O'Donnell said. "This makes it easy to explore the options."

She also said that it will serve as a reminder to freshmen and sophomores about the residency requirements and to educate older students on the options of living on campus only one semester if they need to.

It will also give students who are unaware of the benefits of some residence halls or living communities the information to make a good decision for themselves when signing up for housing.

Event rewards dating sorrows

By Brett Pfeifer
REPORTER

Tonight students will have a chance to vent about misguided relationships.

Kreisher Compton/Darrow is hosting an Ex-Factor Celebration. Students will be given the opportunity to bond with one another by participating in an open microphone session dedicated to anonymously complaining about past relationships and partners. Prizes will be awarded to the person or people with the best sob story/ies.

Following the venting session there will be a "Baby, they don't treat you right" auction where dates will be auctioned to the highest bidder. An added benefit is that the bids are bursarable and the proceeds will be going to The Children's Miracle Network via Dance Marathon.

The event was planned by Rachel Walsh, resident adviser in Darrow, and Kreisher Compton/Darrow's Hall Director LaKeshia Dowlen.

"The idea originated from consoling various friends about their past relationships, particularly during their anniversary periods, those days when it would have been their two or three year anniversary had they maintained the relationship," Walsh said.

"I thought that instead of being depressed by arbitrary calendar dates or glaring at annoyingly blissful new couples, we should have a night of cathartic bitching in which everyone could celebrate the dissolution of their relationships."

Walsh said this is a much healthier and therapeutic alternative to "belligerent phone calls at 3 a.m. that end with 'I hate you, you ruined my life, but what are you doing next weekend,' or analyzing every detail of your relationship with your friends."

"I would like for [students] to think of this as a reality based show, minus the television," Dowlen said.

Walsh sees this experience to be very therapeutic and encourages all students to come because many of the dating ineptitude comes from the genre of individuals who are stu-

Alleged voice of bin Laden aired

By Robert H. Reid
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAIRO, Egypt — In an audio-taped message aired across the Arab world yesterday, a voice purported to be that of Osama bin Laden praised terrorist strikes in Bali and Moscow and threatened Western nations over any attack on Iraq.

If bin Laden's voice is authenticated, his references to recent events would be the clearest indication that the terrorist mastermind survived the Sept. 11 attacks and the U.S. airstrikes in Afghanistan last year.

The speaker on the tape broadcast on Al-Jazeera television referred to the Oct. 12 Bali bombings, the killing last month of a Marine in Kuwait, the bombing of a French oil tanker last month off Yemen and the Chechen hostage taking in Moscow, saying the attacks were "undertaken by sons who are zealous in the defense of their religion."

He said those attacks and others were "only a reaction in response to what (President) Bush, the pharaoh of the age, is doing by killing our sons in Iraq and what America's ally Israel is doing, bombarding houses with women and old people and children inside with American planes."

"Our people in Palestine are being killed, are being subjected to the worse kind of suffering for almost a century now," the speaker said. "If we defend our people in Palestine the world is disturbed and allied against Muslims under the banner of combating terrorism."

The speaker then castigated U.S. allies that have joined the war against terrorism, specifically Britain, France, Italy, Canada, Germany and Australia.

After listing those countries, he warned: "If you don't like looking at your dead...so remember our dead, including the children in Iraq."

In Washington, intelligence

officials were evaluating the tape to verify bin Laden's voice, according to officials who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

American officials have not verified bin Laden's whereabouts this year. The last certain evidence bin Laden was alive was a videotape of him having dinner with some of his deputies, which is believed to have been filmed on Nov. 9, 2001.

Audio recordings are easier to make than videotapes which could reveal whether bin Laden is injured, has significantly altered his looks, or is in a vulnerable location that could be given away in a video appearance.

In September, the Al-Jazeera network aired voice recordings of bin Laden and top al-Qaida operatives. The CIA authenticated bin Laden's voice then, but officials said the recordings probably weren't made recently.

Those statements came out around the anniversary of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon and the start of the war in Afghanistan.

Al-Qaida operatives thought to be alive because of their recent recordings include bin Laden's No. 2, Ayman al-Zawahri, and his spokesman Sulaiman Abu Ghath.

In the al-Zawahri recording, obtained by Associated Press Television News in early October, he spoke about Iraq, accused Washington of seeking to subjugate the Arab world on behalf of Israel — America's strongest supporter in the region — and tried to assure followers that bin Laden was alive and well.

Experts say bin Laden's al-Qaida network is on a renewed public relations campaign aimed at keeping itself in the public eye and associated with events, such as a possible war in Iraq, which could turn the Arab public against the United States.

THE CAMPUS BLOTTER

Friday, Nov. 8:

A McDonald West subject was assaulted, but did not want to press charges.

Vincent A. Staropoli of Westerville, Ohio was issued a citation for driving under suspension, and was given a written warning for speeding. A court date has been set for Nov. 20 at 8:30 a.m.

A campus police unit advised that there were several subjects drinking in a Marshman/Bromfield room. The hall staff will be doing a referral.

A report of an alleged sexual imposition in McDonald North is being investigated by University police.

Mohamed Elmelioui of Toledo was cited for speeding. A court date has been set for Nov. 20 at 8:30 a.m.

A vehicle was keyed while parked in Lot 6.

A report of a possible fire on the Ridge Street side of McDonald East was called in. Upon the officers arrival, there was smoldering trash in the cigarette container. It was extinguished.

The Bowling Green Fire Department was dispatched to a fire alarm in Kreischer Hall. There was no fire. The fire department was cancelled by the University police and the building was checked. The alarm did not sound in the entire A and B wings.

Saturday, Nov. 9:

Ryan Howell of Mt. Gilead, Ohio was cited for driving under the influence of alcohol. A court date has been set for Nov. 13 at 2:30 p.m.

Mark Horak of Copley, Ohio was cited for traffic control device at Thurston and Ridge. A court date has been set for Nov. 13 at 8:30 a.m.

A complainant reported that the sign for the Alpha Omicron Pi house was damaged in the early morning.

Sunday, Nov. 10:

Michael Klingshirm of North Ridgeville, Ohio was cited for under-age consumption and disorderly conduct. A court date has been set for Nov. 18 at 2:30 p.m.

Following a liquor law violation in McDonald West two juvenile subjects were released to the custody of their parents. Five subjects are being referred to student disciplinary.

A fire extinguisher was set off in on the third floor of Ashley. The Bowling Green Fire Department was called and the building was evacuated.

Complainant in Batchelder reported that she lost a necklace from her room.

Monday, Nov. 11:

Two Illinois students were taken to Wood County Hospital by escort from the University Police, the location was reported as the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity. They will be referred to student disciplinary action for an alcohol violation.

Someone set off a fire extinguisher into a student's room in Offenbauer West.

A subject fell on the ice and knocked his tooth out at the Ice Arena. He was transported to the Wood County Hospital.

Nicholas Sharp of Centerville, Ohio was cited for a traffic control device violation, i.e. DO NOT ENTER. A court date has been set for Nov. 18 at 1 p.m.

The poll station outside of Room 208 at the Sigma Chi house was activated which set off the alarm. The Bowling Green Fire Department was dispatched and then cancelled when the officer determined that there was no fire. The building was evacuated. The alarm was set off on purpose, and the guilty party/ies will be referred to student discipline.

Unknown subjects threw a fire extinguisher through the complainants windshield while his vehicle was in Lot C.

"You can walk anywhere on campus and invariably hear people preface conversations with 'I know he/she seems like a jerk but ...' Trust me, this campus needs this event," Walsh said.

The "Ex-Factor Celebration" takes place in 202B of the Student Union from 9:30 p.m. to 12 a.m. and the entire student body is encouraged to participate.

"This night is really an emotional exorcism, to reduce the ex-factor," Walsh said.

N. Illinois wins on, off the field

Northern Illinois University, in its 26-17 defeat of the Falcons on the football field Saturday in De Kalb, Ill., also defeated the University in another way: at the gates.

Midway through the third quarter, the public address announcer proclaimed over the loudspeaker that, for a game that NIU billed as their biggest game in years, the student section had sold out.

Including that student sellout, a total of 25,822 NIU fans filled Huskie Stadium, despite their team not being ranked nationally and not getting any mention on "ESPN Gameday" or any other national publication. The stadium was loud and raucous, especially after the beloved Huskies jumped out to an early 17-0 lead.

Imagine, then, the frustration of our athletic department when, for our Oct. 19 game against Western Michigan (our last home game), the first game in which the Falcons were ranked nationally in 17 years, there were 15,116 fans in the seats at Doyt L. Perry Stadium, a venue which can seat 30,599.

That's less than half capacity for a team that had just been featured on ESPN, a team that had just won their eighth game in a row and led the nation in scoring per game.

In addition, not only were the Falcons gaining respect nationally at the time, but the Western game was deemed by some the best college football games they'd ever seen, as BG rallied from behind in the second half, sent the game to overtime and won 48-45.

The point is that the Falcons should never lose the attendance battle to another Mid-American Conference team. Especially when one considers the team's overall performance this season.

Losing in attendance to other MAC schools can force the team and the University to lose in other areas.

One of those areas being bowl games, whose representatives look at one thing: money. Money comes from the amount of fans a team can bring to a game, which helps to determine the amount of money the game would end up earning.

This weekend the Falcons are heading down south to play

South Florida, a venue not many students can afford to go to. On Nov. 23, however, the football team will be playing Eastern Michigan at home.

For most students, this will be one of the last chances they will have to support their team (they play the University of Toledo on Nov. 30, which is Thanksgiving weekend).

Therefore, The BG News suggests students show their support. The game starts at 6 p.m.

Smoking petition is ridiculous

SCOTT BRYDEN

Guest Columnist

I am writing this in response to original article titled "Help needed for smoking petition."

Let me first start by giving those four ladies a hearty "bravo" for their efforts. It's so comforting to see that people these days are still looking for ways to oppress others to improve their way of life. Gee, can you see the sarcasm?

While I see nothing wrong with people being concerned for their own health, banning smokers from smoking outside anywhere we want is just ridiculous. The air you breathe is just as much ours as it is yours. You want us to have "designated" smoking areas for all smokers? So basically, you're saying you want to have us smokers put in "concentration camps" specifically designed to keep us "smoking freaks" and "health dangers" away from the rest of the populace. The whole idea is ludicrous. You can't put us in special "spots" on campus just like you couldn't do that with, say, someone who has AIDS.

Just because you foresee us as a health risk doesn't give you the right to separate us from the rest of the University.

Now, let's just say for the moment that I agree with your idea. Let's just say I think that we smokers are a significant health risk. If this is so, then I am proposing that you must also include other things in your petition that are health risks to us students. If smokers go to "designated" areas to smoke, I expect to see all cars (both students and faculty) go to one small parking lot area on campus. After all, the pollution that a car's engines put out is more dangerous to us than second-hand smoke is.

Next, I say we make special buildings for anyone who has any type of communicable disease, regardless of whether it is a high risk or not. Any risk at all would be bad, right Mussolini? So let's put everyone who is diagnosed with a communicable disease in a special, sealed-off building where they can't infect anyone else. After all, they are a considerable health risk since people might, however slightly the chance, get infected with their disease. Keep them away from the rest of you "normal" people, right?

Lastly, I expect the University to pass a policy banning televisions and computers from campus. After all, studies show that prolonged exposure to them can cause brain problems and seizure in some individuals. Only a few people have this happen to them, but since it could be any of us, it's a significant health risk to all of us. So let's ban them completely from campus, and who cares if it's taking away freedoms from the rest of the student body. It's all to protect our health.

The whole point of this article is to show you how ridiculous the idea of putting us smokers in "designated" smoking areas is. It's funny how you say we are such a huge risk to you all. Any of you go to bars? Wow, the cloud of smoke in there is much worse than the one outside a building in open air.

Yet, I am sure that every one of you girls goes out to the dance clubs and bars to hang with your friends. I don't see you coming up with a petition to put a stop to that. The point is, I highly doubt that any of you are going to come down with cancer from the person smoking outside a building. I would like to point out that I may be addicted to smoking, but I don't smoke just cause I'm addicted. I like doing it, and will keep doing it so long as I like it. So ladies, I just want you to know that I plan on laughing when the petition gets shot down, and I was wondering if I could ask you something: Would any of you ladies care to join me outside the BA doors for a smoke? I'll even burn you one because I'm a nice guy!

Not all heroes are good role-models

KHARY JACKSON

Opinion Columnist

I share similar sentiment as many of us for genuine heroes. Humanity as a whole has shared a love for heroes, some real, many mythical, all awe-inspiring.

However, our admiration and love for heroes has transformed into a dependence and, dare I say, worship, which desperately needs to be discussed. Thus the subject of this article is the curse of hero worship.

Given the fact that we share such a passion for heroes, it is of little wonder why comic books have enjoyed such longevity and popularity. The allure of superheroes has also caught Hollywood in its web. Spiderman, Superman, Spawn, the X-Men, Batman, Blade and even the Power Puff Girls have amassed legions of fans and followers, much to the financial benefit of the creators of these heroes and more. Let us not forget about the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, the Power Rangers and the characters of DragonBall Z. Adults like these warriors as much as kids, if not more. Is this a problem? No, I remembered those heroes because I liked them, too. They're great! Hell, I still remember the Ninja Turtles theme song! By no means am I anti-hero.

However, as with virtually every other good thing we get into, we go overboard and things can get out of control. (Out of respect for those enthusiastic devotees and fear of their terrible wrath, I will leave Star Wars out of this article.)

Sports stars such as basketball legend Michael Jordan and wrestling icon The Rock also earn our awe. Entertainers seriously benefit. Somebody scores a top ten hit and we lose our minds. A guy that wouldn't have gotten the time of day from even the most insecure of girls makes a popular song and suddenly becomes a walking mound of Victoria's Secret undies. Sure, the silk is nice, but what did the guy do other than croon?

Barry White growls, and then gets laid. Fred Durst squeals, and then gets laid. Bono saves the world, and then gets laid — a beautiful day indeed. As for Bill Clinton, let's not be fooled about the real reason for his impeachment. He had a monopoly on ass — ugly ass, granted, but he apparently wasn't picky. Look who he married.

Ass aside, there are other ways these figures influence us. A kid may drop out of college and tell his parents, "But Bill Gates dropped out, and he's the richest man in the world!"

Another kid actually ran over someone with his car because he saw it on MTV's "Jackass", and thereby lived up to the title. These are just a few examples of how we place such high value on people because of their visibility and/or status. We see these people succeed and treat them as heroes.

Meanwhile, these so-called heroes are simply doing their job and reaping the rewards, not trying to show us the way to happiness and success.

However, I remind you that I am not anti-hero. I instead encourage people to redefine how their heroes should be. The fact that a person is famous does not automatically disqualify someone from being an inspiration, but neither does that automatically qualify that person to be an inspiration.

People are people, some more visible than others, but still people living their lives.

As much as I like Batman and Blade, I do not consider them my heroes. They do not particularly inspire me. I was inspired by baseball's Anaheim Angels and how they climbed out of the pack to become World Series champions for the first time ever. I was inspired by watching the film "Men of Honor" wherein Navy amputee Carl Brashear won his career back despite his injury. I was inspired when I listened to a children's choir sing like it was their last day on earth. I was inspired when during a violent storm, I noticed a baby tree still standing as strong as the others.

The nicest thing about these more obscure examples are that they show us how each and every one of us can be a hero in our own right. To be a light for someone, if only for a moment, is all that's needed for us to etch our names into the list of heroes. I find that itself to be quite inspiring.

Carter questions quitting football

WILL

Sports reporter

Great athletes coming out of retirement is nothing new. We have seen it for many years in all four major professional team sports. The latest to continue this trend is former Minnesota Vikings receiver Cris Carter, who took a job alongside Bob Costas, Dan Marino and Chris Collinsworth on HBO's Inside the NFL earlier this fall. His seat on the show sits empty now as he was recently coaxed into coming out of retirement to play for the Miami Dolphins, a team that lost leading receiver Oronde Gadsden for the remainder of the season due to injury.

Carter was signed to a one-year contract by the Dolphins and reported to practice about a week before the team's Monday night game against the Green Bay Packers. He retired from the Vikings as one of few receivers in the history of pro football with 1000 receptions. Unfortunately, his first game back might be the last of his career. A kidney ailment has sidelined Carter indefinitely, possibly for the year.

Despite Carter's potentially-failed attempt at a comeback to the NFL, many other who have come out of retirement have done so with great success.

Former NFL defensive lineman Reggie White retired from the Green Bay Packers in 1999, then came back and played two more seasons with the Packers and Carolina Panthers.

Hockey legend Mario Lemieux was forced into early retirement due to Hodgkin's disease, a form of cancer. However, he returned to the game at the midway point of last season. Despite playing hurt that year, he currently leads the NHL in total points.

In addition, of course, is Michael Jordan. He came out of retirement the first time in 1995 and led the Chicago Bulls to another three-peat from 1996 to 1998. He collected three scoring titles and two league MVP's in the process. After retiring again in 1998, he returned to the NBA as a player for the second time with the Washington Wizards. Though showing signs of aging, Jordan averaged over twenty points a game before a knee

Women fall to Premiers

By Zach Baker
SPORTS REPORTER

Despite an 87-83 exhibition loss to the Premier All-Stars last night at Anderson Arena, there were plenty of positives for the women's basketball team.

Stefanie Wenzel scored 26 points, and freshman center Jill Lause had eight rebounds to go along with 14 points.

The Falcons' Coach Curt Miller said that the game helped the Falcons in preparation for the season.

"You use exhibition games to really find out going into the season what you need to keep working on," Miller said. "I'm ecstatic at how we played at times."

The All-Stars were a group of players with strong college — and in some cases professional — careers. Trish Bader-Binford, one of the team's guards, still plays for the Cleveland Rockers of the WNBA.

Miller said that BG had to combat the strong individual players on the All-Stars roster with teamwork. He also said that the All-Stars' guards — Bader-Binford and Jamie Lewis, are better than any of the guards BG will face this year.

The Falcons had a strong offensive first half, and led the All-Stars 44-39 at the break. Lause led the team with 10 first-half points. Lause said she was happy to be contributing, and gave credit to her teammates, but she also kept her performance in perspective.

"I couldn't have done it without everybody else who was out there," Lause said. "It just shows how hard we have been working in practice. Even though we had a decent game tonight, we still have a lot to work on."

The All-Stars were able to take control in the second half, outscoring BG 48-39. Miller said that the team's inability to get to the line hurt its ability to win. He also said that opponents are getting too many trips to the line. Even though BG was 10-10 at the line, only one of those free throws came in the second half. The All-Stars had 23 second-half free throw attempts.

"We, as a penetrating, aggressive offense, we have to be able to get to the foul line," Miller said. "We are just fouling too much, and (the All-Stars') quickness and penetration gave us trouble."

Miller said he was pleased with several aspects of the game, including the play of Wenzel.

"Obviously Stefanie Wenzel

SEALED: Ohio State's Chris Gamble clinches the Buckeyes' win over Purdue with this interception Saturday.

OSU looks to go 13-0

By Rusty Miller
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, — With a win at Illinois on Saturday, No. 2 Ohio State would become the first team in the school's 113 years of football to be 12-0.

Quite an accomplishment? Nope, just a stop along the way.

"12-0 is not going to be as sweet as 13-0, so we've got to focus on the moment," linebacker Matt Wilhelm said. "In the snap of a finger, it could all be taken away. We realize that."

After playing the Illini (4-6, 3-3 Big Ten), the Buckeyes close out the regular season the same way they've closed out every one since 1942: against rival Michigan.

"We still have a chance to be thought of as an extraordinary group."

JIM TRESSEL, OHIO STATE FOOTBALL COACH

Ohio State (11-0, 6-0), the No. 1 team in the BCS rankings, has its season in its hands. The Buckeyes don't need help from anyone else. It's simple: win two more and they're assured of no worse than a share of the Big Ten title and a trip to the BCS national championship game in the Fiesta Bowl on Jan. 3.

"It would be nice making history as a 12-0 team," wide receiver Michael Jenkins said. "But 13-0 is a big goal and we have to focus in on being 12-0 first."

It was Jenkins who helped keep the Buckeyes perfect, catching a 37-yard touchdown pass from Craig Krenzel on fourth-and-1 with 1:36 left at Purdue on Saturday. That gave the Buckeyes yet another close win on the road, 10-6.

"We still have a chance to be thought of as an extraordinary group," coach Jim Tressel said. "We'll see how it works out."

As always, Tressel said his concentration is only on the next game. He said earlier this season that he didn't know where his team was ranked in the BCS. He has said he doesn't have any idea about how good other teams or players are around the country.

Despite living most of his life in Ohio — and following the Ohio State program closely in his 15 years as the head coach at Youngstown State — Tressel said he hadn't considered what a watershed event it would be to have the first 12-0 record at the school.

"All I know is I'd rather be 12-0 than the other," he said. "That's what we're working on. I haven't given it any thought."

Ohio State went 11-0 in 1975, 1979 and 1995 — and each time lost the next game.

Cavs' Davis benched in first half

By Dan Gelston
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Leading scorer Ricky Davis was benched by the Cleveland Cavaliers early during last night's game against Indiana, then did not return for the start of the second half.

Davis, who averages 23.4 points, was benched 6 minutes into the game and took a seat on the baseline next to the team's bench. He put his warmup outfit, draped a towel over his back and even stretched out his 6-foot-7 frame, resting his head on a stack of towels.

He didn't join the Cavaliers in the huddle during timeouts, instead standing off to the side with his hands in his pockets and looking around the arena. Assistant coach Keith Smart gave a few disgusted glances toward Davis, who turned around and said, "I don't know what the hell's going on."

Smart came over during the final time-out of the first half and put his arm around Davis, and both smiled as they talked.

Davis failed to participate in the halftime shootaround and did not return for the second half. He scored two points on 1-for-2 shooting.

A Cavaliers spokeswoman said she didn't know why Davis failed to return.

That wasn't the only distraction on the bench.

Coach John Lucas also screamed and waved a finger in the face of rookie point guard Smush Parker early in the second quarter. The point guard combination of Parker, Milt Palacio and Bimbo Coles was criticized last week by forward Tyrone Hill. Hill guaranteed the Cavaliers, off to a 2-5 start, would be in the playoffs if they had a true point guard.

Lucas said that was no longer an issue.

Men's soccer learns from losses near season's end

Team perseverance has brought these players to the top of the MAC tournament bracket.

By Nathan Roehl
SPORTS REPORTER

The Bowling Green men's soccer team has been a frustrating one this season for followers, but it has been satisfying as well.

Time after time one would watch as they dropped hard-fought games and one could see the elements of victory were there for this team. On offense, they were never spectacular, but they always found ways of getting the important goal scored in the games they needed one. Defensively they were able to play consistently throughout the season and goalkeeper David DeGraff kept them in a lot of games in which the rest of the team got badly outplayed. The coaching staff never lost hope in this group of mostly transfers and freshmen.

It was hard to tell at times throughout the early parts of the season which team would show up, and how they would fare against better opponents.

Something happened between the end of the non-conference schedule and the beginning of the MAC schedule, or perhaps it can be more rightly said that something didn't happen: the team never stopped giving the effort necessary to win games, even though it took them a long time to win one. They took that perseverance and did what it took to end the MAC season on top of the regular season standings and on top of the MAC tournament bracket.

"I think being the number one seed is definitely a plus for us, we only have to win one game and we're already in the semifinals," first-year assistant coach Matt Dougherty said.

"If we go out there and win one game we have a great opportunity to go out there and host the MAC finals. But by no means could I say we are feeling overconfident. We feel very fortunate the way the season has gone to win a small number of games but also to have won the right games. I think the guys are in good spir-BGSU traveled to Cleveland Friday night to take on John Carroll University in a short one-game weekend.

The weekend was a success, with a close 3-2 win, extending BG's winning streak to 7 and overall record to 8-4. The game was fast-paced from the start, but with both teams going into the locker room tied 0-0 after the first period. BG would strike first midway through the second on a short-handed goal by Captain Dave Sampen. A 5-on-3 disadvantage allowed JCU to tie the game later, but in the third period, the Falcons scored twice more with another by Sampen and the game winning, go-ahead goal by Tony Sands.

John Carroll made a late push to tie the game, but was turned away by goaltender Bobby Povtak, who got the win stopping by 27 of 29 shots. BG travels to Fort Wayne this weekend to take on Indiana-Purdue-Fort Wayne in a two-game series.

Swim team takes competition in stride

By Melanie Menz
SPORTS REPORTER

The BG swim team took a long road trip over the weekend, traveling to Buffalo, N.Y., where they competed in two dual meets and ended up short in both of them. Defeated by Ball State (218-82) and the host Bulls (193-107), the Falcons find themselves with a 2-4 record going into a restful weekend.

"There were no surprises really in this meet," co-captain Sarah Agnew said. "I think the only thing that we had thought going into this weekend was that the score to be a lot closer to Ball State than it was. This was our chance to really step up and show people that we are a new team."

The team had one lone winner during the meet. It came from Dana Schultz, as she won the 100-yard butterfly with a time of 58.89.

"The freshmen are stepping up and making the transition into college swimming really well for our team," Agnew said. "Having them on the team makes the team lighter in ways. If they have any problems or questions they are coming to us, but other than that they are doing everything that we ask them to do."

Agnew came in 2nd in both of her events swimming the 100-yard breaststroke in the time of 1:08.04 and the 200-yard breaststroke in the time of 2:25.40. After that, there were many third-place finishes that kept Bowling Green competitive throughout the meet. Kara Ohgren swam the 150-yard freestyle in 7:47.81, Alissa Davies swam the 50 free in 25.21, Tina Sestan swam the 200-yard backstroke in 2:12.26 and Erin Dilkes swam the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:30.27.

"Overall it was a good meet," Agnew said. "Our divers also did an amazing job."

The swim team has a weekend off this week, as the divers will compete in the Falcon Diving Invitational that will be held here in Bowling Green Saturday at 1 p.m. After that they have three tough meets ahead of them on the road against Ohio State, Wright State and Notre Dame.

"I think practices will get a little harder this week since we have the weekend to rest," Agnew said. "We want to continue to train harder, so that we are not compromising in any meet that may be an easy one for us to win. If we can train tired and little harder everyday, I can't imagine what this team can do when we are fully rested."

The toughest part of their schedule is yet to come, but they will take it day-by-day. They will get back to action in two weeks when they head back on the road again to travel to Columbus and Dayton.

"Going to Ohio State and Wright State are going to be big meets," Agnew said. "Then after Thanksgiving, we have Notre Dame that will be one of our toughest battles yet."

Gabel places third in season's finale

By Elliot Schreiner
SPORTS REPORTER

The BG tennis team wrapped up their fall season last weekend at the Mid-American Conference's Fall Indoor Tournament in Kalamazoo, Mich.

With Lisa Maloney and Jessica Johnson not playing, the Falcons knew entering the tournament that there was a rough road ahead.

Add in a very deep and talented group of MAC teams and this weekend looked unbearable for the Falcons.

This wasn't the end of the Falcons' woes as they lost a draw at the beginning of the tournament that required them to play two players in the first flight.

This, paired with the absent players, caused all of the Falcons to play up one flight or more.

Needless to say, these are all the ingredients for a hectic weekend.

"We had both good and bad results this weekend," Dean said. "We had a long layoff and I think that led to some inconsistency."

Even though inconsistency was present, there were also positive results.

Laura Kokinda, Heidi Romer and Gaby Coello all took fourth place finishes while playing in higher flights.

Coello, accustomed to playing in a middle flight, moved up to the No. 2 slot and faced a level of competition that she was not used to.

"I was really happy with Gaby," Dean said. "She played really tough opponents and kept a good mental attitude throughout the tournament."

While Coello, Kokinda and Romer each had solid weekends in singles competition, none of them outshined their teammate Alyson Gabel.

Playing in the final fall match of her career, Gabel saved her best for last.

After battling to play for a chance for third place, she ran into a rival and acquaintance from Ball State, Jill Wieman.

Last season, Wieman handed

Gabel a heartbreaking loss.

"Alyson took a big lead against her last year, but Wieman came back to win," Dean said.

This year's story was different. Gabel defeated Wieman 6-4, 6-0 en route to capturing third place.

"I started the match off well," Gabel said. "I just focused on each point and fought hard the whole match."

The win capped off a successful tournament for Gabel, who also looked solid in doubles action with Coello.

"We played poor in doubles, you could tell that Alyson and Gaby were the only pair used to playing together," Dean said. "It just looked like we didn't know what we were doing sometimes."

While this tournament wasn't as positive as the Falcons' past tournaments, they know that there is always tomorrow.

"We have our work cut out for us over the winter," Dean said. "I know we could've done better, and the other MAC teams will see our best in the spring."

Carter's decision the wrong one injury ended his season in early April. He returns this year as a sixth man looking to guide the Wizards to the NBA playoffs for the first time since they were called the Bullets. Many others have come out of retirement and made significant contributions to their respective teams.

The difference with Carter's comeback attempt from the attempts of the aforementioned is simple. Cris Carter will not make a significant contribution to the Dolphins due to lack of preparation. Both Jordan and Lemieux are thriving in their sports because they spent much of their short-lived retirements conditioning and practicing. Carter just came back. The only physical preparation he had for his first game was a single week of practice with a quarterback he had never played with.

No one can say for sure why Cris Carter came back. It could be for money, though it seems highly unlikely. Whatever the reason, his attempt at regaining his past glory will fall short (if it already hasn't). Sometimes, it just better to walk away while you're still among the best. It seems that some athletes just cannot let go.

Grizzlies' basketball coach Sidney Lowe backs out of season

By Woody Baird
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — The Memphis Grizzlies brought back Hubie Brown from the broadcast booth, picking him to coach the NBA's only winless team after Sidney Lowe resigned yesterday.

Jerry West, Memphis' president of basketball operations, called the 69-year-old Brown "the consummate teacher" and said the Turner Sports analyst was exactly what the young Grizzlies need.

Brown was scheduled to join the 0-8 Grizzlies on Wednesday. Memphis' next game is Friday night against Minnesota.

"He sounds like a teenager rearing for his first date," West said.

West declined to give details of Brown's contract with Memphis except to say "it's for more than one year." Brown last coached in the NBA in the 1986-87 season with the New York Knicks.

Lowe's resignation came the day after the Grizzlies lost to Golden State 108-101 at home.

"I wish the team well," Lowe said in a statement. "The Grizzlies have some good, young talent here, and they are going to be good in the future."

The Grizzlies have been among the worst NBA teams recently, going 23-59 in each of the previous two seasons.

West said the resignation was Lowe's idea.

"I think Sidney was frustrated with the way we were playing, frustrated with the results. I think in his mind he thought it was in his best interest and in the team's best interest to resign," West said.

Brown spent 10 seasons coaching in the NBA with the Knicks and the Atlanta Hawks. He was chosen as Coach of the Year in 1978 with the Hawks.

West said Brown was his top choice for a new coach, and said it took just one phone call to fill the job.

"I don't know how we got a coach here this quickly, but I feel very, very confident that we got a guy here who will be the ultimate teacher," West said.

Lowe was in his third season with the Grizzlies, who have not had a winning season since joining the NBA in 1995. The franchise moved to Memphis last year from Vancouver.

No Bowling Green men's soccer team had ever started the season with eight consecutive losses. Now, it can also be said that no Bowling Green men's team had ever started the season with eight consecutive losses and won the MAC regular season. So, then, it could end in another MAC title and a birth to the NCAA tournament.

"I think we can. I think we have proved it throughout the course of the year. I like to think the games in which we've struggled and lost were ones we really learned from," Dougherty said. "The lessons were especially important for our young players trying to make the huge transition from high school to college soccer. It's a completely different game. I think they're ready now;

we've played some tough matches."

Akron will take on Marshall at Mickey Cochrane Field Friday in the first semifinal game at noon, and the Falcons will face defending champion Kentucky at 2:30 as all the remaining games for the MAC tournament will be played at Cochrane Field. The MAC final will be played Sunday, November 17 at 1 p.m., pitting the two semifinal winners.
